Projects

PARALLAX EFFECT BY USING HTML AND CSS

Project Link

Parallax Effect using HTML and CSS This project demonstrates my ability to create engaging visual experiences using HTML and CSS. I implemented a parallax scrolling effect, where background images move at different speeds than foreground elements, adding depth and dynamism to the webpage. This project required strong understanding of positioning, layering, and animation techniques. I also ensured responsiveness across various screen sizes, showcasing my commitment to user experience.

Rock paper scissors game usingc++

Project Link

Developed a Rock Paper Scissors game in C++ where the user inputs their choice (Rock, Paper, or Scissors), and the computer randomly selects one. The game then determines the winner based on the rules of the game

HACKATHON Certificate

This certificate recognizes my participation in a hackathon organized by Google Developer Student Clubs (GDSC). During the event, I collaborated with other developers to solve real-world problems using innovative solutions. This experience honed my skills in teamwork, problem-solving, and rapid prototyping. I am grateful for the opportunity to have participated in this challenging and rewarding event.

HACKATHON Certificate

This certificate recognizes participation in a hackathon hosted by Google Developer Student Clubs (GDSC). It demonstrates the recipient's ability to collaborate, problem-solve, and innovate within a limited timeframe. This experience honed their skills in areas such as coding, design thinking, and project management. **Note:** This description is 249 characters long and focuses on the skills the user could possess.
